Pacific Princess

The Pacific Princess is a stylish, elegant, well-designed ship offering exotic itineraries for Princess Cruises. The ship's small size allows her to visit less well-known and smaller ports on all her itineraries, and to dock closer to points of interest in larger ports than her mega-ship colleagues.

Pacific Princess, with its sister "R-class" ship, Ocean Princess, offers some of the line's more exotic itineraries in Europe, Asia and South America, including a 107-night World Cruise beginning each January from Ft. Lauderdale to Venice. The 30,277-ton, 680-passenger pair were acquired in 2002 from a non functioning Renaissance Cruises, and are by far the smallest ships in Princess' fleet.

With its dark wood and plush interiors, Pacific Princess resembles a stately manor house or country inn. The more intimate size facilitates friendliness; don't be surprised if the staff knows your name and says hello when you pass by.

Evening entertainment revolves around the Cabaret Lounge, which is equipped with a state-of-the-art sound and lighting system and presents a full schedule of options, including first-run movies, live music, variety shows and more. Live piano music is available at the Casino Bar, and the adjacent casino offers table games and slot machines. Sea days may include destination-specific lectures, and classes on photography and computer technology (all are part of Princess' enrichment-focused ScholarShip@Sea program).
